

International Association for Sports Information Leipzig, 2011 Consensus Statement

About Us

The International Association of Sport Information (IASI) brings together experts in sport information and communication. Members of IASI are based in national and international sport and sport science organisations and institutions that focus on quality assured information and knowledge transfer to sport practice. At present, these experts and organisations have a substantial focus on the support of high performance sport. These organisations have close connections with their National Olympic Committee and coaches in junior and senior elite sport.

IASI has been restructured during the last two years and provides a global forum for the development of modern sports information and communication services in IASI's fields of expertise.

What We Do

IASI is the leading international organisation with a focus on the delivery of sport information.

IASI is an advocate for the use and development of sport information services.

IASI seeks close cooperation with leading national and international sport and sport scientific organisations.

What Are Our Next Steps?

In the next two years (to December 2012) IASI is committed to:

Gaining access to television footage from major international sporting events on behalf of high performance sports training and research centre member organisations for the purpose of non-commercial, scientific performance analysis in order to support performance enhancement in elite sport;

Developing tools (starting with a digital online dictionary of sport science) and the platform for an international, open access, Internet based virtual library of sport science resources.